

Haiku

Fresh air after rain

Wet branches drip heavily

The soil is refreshed.

A Haiku Poem is a traditional Japanese art form which consists of three lines. The first and last line of the Haiku poem has five syllables and the middle line has seven syllables. It isn't a traditional rhyming poem so the lines in a Haiku poem don't need to rhyme.

Stand in your garden, or out on your street, note down the following:

- What is the weather like?
- What you can hear?
- What can you smell?
- What can you see?

Using the format of 5 syllables, 7 syllables, 5 syllables write yourself a Haiku poem about what you experienced outside.

Weeds are just flowers

Sprouted in the wrong places

Beauty forgotten
